Electronic and online communications surround us and have progressed from simple e-mail to blogs, social networking sites, and political debates fueled by YouTube videos. Learn how the most current issues surrounding these forms of communication affect you, your firm, and most importantly your clients. Topics will focus on managing user-generated content and user agreements; employment concerns related to user-generated content, terms of use, and unauthorized use of computers; information privacy; and electronic discovery. Gain an understanding of how legal ethics apply to electronic information, including legal advertising, websites, e-mail, and metadata.

Special lunch presentation by Richard Owens, World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO).

Computer and Internet Law Section members save $20 off registration rates.
